Company Profile

Air China is responsible for the task of providing special flight services for China's leaders when they go on foreign trips. It is also responsible for chartering special flights within China for many foreign heads of state and government leaders, thereby demonstrating Air China's exclusive status as the national flag carrier. Headquartered in Beijing, Air China has several branch offices in areas such as Southwest China, Zhejiang, Chongqing, Tianjin, Shanghai, Hubei, Xingjiang, Guangdong, Guizhou, Tibet, and Wenzhou.

Partnerships

Air China has struck up regional and global alliances with some of the world's fine airlines, which has tremendously expanded Air China's presence. With codeshare, Air China can now provide access to all parts of the world.

If Air China's flight number shown on your ticket is one of those shown below, services will be provided by Air China's partner airline, which means the flight is operated by Air China's partner airline (operating carrier). Please head to the check-in counters of our partner airline for check-in.

Cooperation

Air China became a Star Alliance member in December 2007. As a member of Star Alliance and China's sole flag carrier, Air China has a strong domestic and international route network and sales network, and an extensive high quality customer base.

Star Alliance was established in 1997 and is the world's largest airline alliance. It brings together 26 member airlines, offering more than 10,000 daily departures. Their combined fleets serve over more than 50 hub airports, in over 1,200 destinations, across 184 countries worldwide.

If you are a member of a frequent flyer programme with any of Star Alliance's 26 member airlines, you can earn and redeem miles or points when you fly with another member airline.
